LONDON, SEPTEMBER 21.

JUST PUBLISHED, (enlarged and improved with many new Matters, never before printed) Price 5*s*. The Administration of the Colonies; wherein their Rights and Conſtitution are diſcuſſed and ſtated.

By THOMAS POWNALL,

Late Governor and Commander in Chief of his Majeſty's Provinces of Maſſachuſetts-Bay, and South-Carolina, and Lieutenant Governor of New-Jerſey.

To the PRINTER, &c.

THERE is ſomething ſo very pertinent in the dedication of Governor Pownall's adminiſtration of the colonies, to Mr. George Grenville, that I have made an extract of it, for the entertainment of your readers.

To the Right Hon. GEORGE GRENVILLE, Eſq.

SIR,

WHEN I firſt publiſhed my opinions upon the adminiſtration of the Colonies, I addreſſed the book to you. You was then miniſter in this country, and had taken an active and leading part in the adminiſtration of thoſe affairs; I did not by that addreſs dedicate as is the uſual phraſe, my opinions to the miniſter, for our opinions differed on ſeveral points: But as diſputes upon a queſtion, pregnant with the moſt dangerous conſequences, began to be agitated between the miniſter of this country and the coloniſts, which I ſaw muſt ſoon extend themſelves in contentions with parliament itſelf; As I ſaw a ſpirit of ſuſpicion and alarm ariſing, a temper of ill blood infuſing itſelf into the minds of men; I endeavoured to obviate theſe miſchiefs, by marking in that addreſs, that, as there were neither arbitrary intentions on one hand againſt the liberties of the colonies, nor rebellious deſigns on the other againſt the juſt imperium of government; ſo there was a certain good temper and right ſpirit, which if obſerved on all ſides, might bring theſe matters of diſpute to ſuch a ſettlement as political truth and liberty are beſt eſtabliſhed upon.

You had conceived, that government hath a right to avail itſelf in its finances, of the revenues of all its dominions, and that the impoſing taxes, by parliament, for the ſaid purpoſe, was the conſtitutional mode of doing this. The coloniſts who were not repreſented in parliament by knights and burgeſſes of their own election, "did apprehend, they had reaſon to fear ſome danger of arbitrary rule over them when the ſupreme power of the nation had thought proper to impoſe taxes on his Majeſty's American ſubjects, with the ſole and expreſs purpoſe of raiſing a revenue, and without their conſent."

Parliament had, by a ſolemn act, declared that it hath a right to make laws, which ſhall be binding upon the people of the colonies, ſubjects of Great-Britain, in all caſes whatſoever,——while the coloniſts ſay, in all caſes which can conſiſt with the fundamental rules of the conſtitution; by which limitation, they except the caſe of taxation, where there is not repreſentation. Hence the coloniſts have, by many, been deemed factious, undutiful and diſloyal, and even chargeable with treaſon itſelf.

I had been ſufficiently converſant in theſe affairs, altho' neither employed nor conſulted in them, ſince I left America, to know that theſe alternate charges were falſe and groundleſs; that there were neither arbitrary intentions on one hand, nor ſeditious views on the other. As therefore, by my addreſs, I meant to do juſtice to your principles, which I knew to be thoſe of peace and government eſtabliſhed on political liberty,——ſo I took that occaſion, as I will ever eſteem it a duty to do, to bear my teſtimony to the affection which the coloniſts ever bore to the mother country, to their zeal for its welfare, to their ſenſe of government and their loyalty to their ſovereign, as alſo how much they have merited from this country, and how much they deſerve to be conſidered by it, in order to put theſe matters of diſpute on a footing of reconciliation, fair diſcuſſion and equitable ſettlement.

It is great pity that queſtions of this nature were ever raiſed, "for, it is a very unſafe thing in ſettled governments, to argue the reaſon of the fundamental conſtitutions."—— But when contrary propoſitions are alternately brought forward by the repreſentatives of two people, as the avowed principles of their reſpective conſtituents; when an inferior government, which invariably acknowledges its dependence on a ſuperior and ſupream government, thinks it hath a right to call into queſtion ſome particular exertions of power in that government, by rules which limit the extent of that power, it is abſolutely neceſſary to decide ſuch queſtion, or to give ſuch explanations of the matter, that it may ceaſe to be a queſtion;——for ſo long as it continues in doubt, the parties will alternately charge each other with arbitrary principles, and a ſpirit of ſedition, with tyranny and rebellion;——and frequent injurious acts of violence, which numberleſs events will ever give occaſion to, muſt neceſſarily be animated with a ſpirit too nearly allied to the one and to the other—The matter is in that ſtate that it ought to come before parliament, it muſt, it will, it is neceſſary to the ſupport of government that it ſhould;——it is neceſſary to the ſecurity of the nation and its intereſt:——It is neceſſary to the peace, liberties, and conſtitution of the coloniſts; it is neceſſary to the ſafety of miniſters.

I have in this preſent edition, gone into the diſcuſſion of this matter, as it lies in fact, and as it hath, at the firſt ſettlement of the colonies, and in the different periods of their progreſs, exiſted in right, eſtabliſhed on ſuch fact. I have ſtated the fact, and the right, in hopes to point out what is the true and conſtitutional relation between Great-Britain and the American colonies, what is the preciſe ground on which this dangerous queſtion ought to be ſettled: How far they are to be governed by the vigor of external principles, by the ſupreme ſuperintending power of the mother country: How far by the vigor of the internal principles of their own peculiar body politic: And what ought to be the mode of adminiſtration, by which they are to be governed in their legiſlative, executive, judicial and commercial departments, in the conduct of their money and revenues, in their power of making peace or war.

In the courſe of this reaſoning, while I ſtate the rights of the colonies, as thoſe of Engliſhmen, to all intents and purpoſes; while I ſtate how the colonies have been adminiſtered, as diſtinct, free communities, and how they ought ſtill to be adminiſtered, if they are not united to the realm.——I ſhow that the coloniſts, although without the limits of the realm, are yet in fact, of the realm; are annexed, if not yet united parts of the realm; are preciſely in the predicament of the counties Palatine of Durham and Cheſter; and therefore ought, in the ſame manner to be united to the realm, in a full and abſolute communication and communion of all rights, franchiſes and liberties, which any other part of the realm hath, or doth enjoy, or ought to have and to enjoy; in communication of the ſame burthens, offices, and emoluments, in communion of the ſame foederal and commercial rights, in the ſame exerciſe of judicial and executive powers,——in the ſame participation of council.—— And that therefore, in the courſe and procedure of our government with the colonies, there muſt ariſe a duty in government to give, a right in the colonies to claim, a ſhare in the legiſlature of Great-Britain, by having knights and burgeſſes of their own election, repreſenting them in Parliament.

It makes no difference in the matter of the truth, whether the government of England ſhould be averſe to the extending of this privilege to the colonies, or whether the colonies ſhould be averſe to the receiving of it:—Whether we, from pride and jealouſy, or they, from fears and doubts, ſhould be repugnant to this union. For, whether we reaſon from experience and the authority of example: Or whether we conſider the policy, injuſtice, and neceſſity, of the meaſure, the concluſion is unavoidably the ſame; the propoſition invariably true. That, "the Britiſh Iſles, with our poſſeſſions in the Atlantic and in America, are in fact, united into a one grand marine dominion: And ought therefore, by policy, to be united into a one imperium, in a one center, where the ſeat of government is." And ought to be governed from hence, by an adminiſtration founded on the baſis of the whole, and adequate and efficient to the whole.

I have not ſtated the neceſſity of this meaſure, for reaſons which cannot but be obvious to any prudent man; but I have ventured to affirm, that ſuch is the actual ſtate of the ſyſtem of the Britiſh dominions, that neither the power of government, over theſe various parts, can long continue under the preſent mode of adminiſtration; nor the great intereſt of commerce, extended throughout the whole, long ſubſiſt under the preſent ſyſtem of the laws of trade.

As I do from my beſt judgment ſincerely believe that a general and intire union of the Britiſh dominions, is the only meaſure by which Great-Britain can be continued in its political liberty, and commercial proſperity, perhaps in its exiſtence: So I make no ſcruple to averr, that if this meaſure be not adopted in policy, as it really exiſts in fact, it will ſoon become the duty of the ſeveral diſunited parts, to look narrowly to, and ſtand firm in, the maintenance of their undoubted rights in that ſtate and relation, in which the adminiſtration of government ſhall hold them. As I have pointed out the mode, how government may purſue its duty, conſiſtent with the fundamentals of the conſtitution; ſo have I ſuggeſted, through every ſtep, how the American may fortify himſelf in theſe rights, conſiſtent with his alliance.

When I had firſt an opportunity of converſing with, and knowing the ſentiments of the Commiſſioners of the ſeveral provinces of North-America, convened at Albany; of learning from their experience and judgment, the actual ſtate of the American buſineſs and intereſt; of hearing among them, the grounds and reaſons of that American union which they then had under deliberation, and tranſmitted the plan of to England: I then firſt conceived the idea, and ſaw the neceſſity of a general Britiſh union.

I then firſt mentioned my ſentiments on this ſubject to ſeveral of thoſe Commiſſioners,——and at that time firſt propoſed my conſiderations, on a general plan of union,——I had the ſatisfaction to find many of the meaſures, which I did then propoſe, adopted; and the much greater ſatisfaction of ſeeing the good effect of them: But this particular meaſure was at that time, I dare ſay, conſidered as theory and viſion, and perhaps may, at this time, be thought ſo ſtill: But every event that hath ſince ariſen, every meaſure which hath ſince been taken, through every period of buſineſs in which I have been concerned, or of which I have been cogniſant, hath confirmed me in my idea of the ſtate of things, and of the truth of the meaſure. At this period, every man of buſineſs in Britain, as well as in America, ſees the effect of this ſtate of things, and may, in future, ſee the neceſſity of this meaſure.

The whole train of events, the whole courſe of buſineſs, muſt perpetually bring forward into practice, and neceſſarily in the end, into eſtabliſhment——either an American or a Britiſh union.——There is no other alternative, the only conſideration which remains to every good man, who loves the peace and liberties of mankind, is whether the one or the other ſhall be forced into exiſtence, by the violence of parties, and at the hazard of events; or whether by the deliberate legiſlative advice of the repreſentative of all who are concerned.——

May both the Briton and the American take this conſideration to heart; and, whatever be the fate of parties and factions, of patriots or miniſters, may the true government of laws prevail, and rights of men be eſtabliſhed in political liberty.

ST. JOHN, (in Antigua) DECEMBER 24.

By Letters from St. Vincent, of the 13*th Inſtant, we are informed that a number of armed Charibs aſſembled on the North ſide of the River Niambou, (which lies about five miles North Eaſt of the neareſt Engliſh ſettlement) in order to hinder the King's Surveyors from carrying the road beyond that River, which they declared they would not ſuffer them to paſs on any pretence whatever. The Surveyors immediately informed the Commiſſioners, who made application to the Preſident, in order to obtain a party of Soldiers for the protection of the Surveyors. Accordingly a party of* 100 men was ordered to march to the River Niambou. The Preſident and Members of the Council went at the ſame time in order to conciliate matters; upon the approach of the Grenadiers, the Indians on the other ſide of the River, immediately diſperſed. They abandoned their habitations, and it was with difficulty that a few of their Chiefs were induced to return and ſpeak to the Preſident; they ſhewed great terror and ſurpriſe at the appearance of the troops, and promiſed for the future, to behave peaceably and to pay entire obedience to his Majeſty's commands: Since that time ſeveral Gentlemen have gone through their Country to a conſiderable diſtance. The Country is ſaid to be a very fine one; half of the troops returned to the Barracks, the other half continues to attend the Surveyors.

Extract of another Letter from ST. VINCENT'S.

The Surveyors who were employed to cut a Road into the Indian Country, were (contrary to all expectation) ſtopped by the firſt and moſt friendly Tribe, upon which the Preſident went with 100 Soldiers, and Yeſterday news came that upon their approach the Tribe had aſked pardon.

 Advertiſements omitted this Week for want of Room, will be in our next.

CHARLES-TOWN RACES,

BEGINS on Tueſday the Seventh of February, 1769; when the MANE of COCKS will be fought.

THE GENTLEMEN belonging to the CHARLES-TOWN TROOP of HORSE, commanded by Captain WILLIAM MOULTRIE, are deſired to meet at Mr. DILLON's, on Wedneſday the firſt of February next, at Six o'Clock in the Evening, to ſettle Matters previous to their muſtering, which will be ſhortly afterwards.

MORO never having intended a challenge to CENTINEL, or any other aged horſe, to run a match of ſix miles, or the beſt of three four mile heats, thinks there does not require any further anſwer to an extraordinary advertiſement of CENTINEL's, pretending to do what was never above once or twice done in England by the firſt rate horſes there, MORO being more modeſt than to propoſe a thing of that kind, but has offered to run againſt CENTINEL the uſual diſtance four year olds and aged horſes do in England, which he has refuſed, viz. a match of four miles this year for 300 guineas, MORO carrying 8 ſtone, and CENTINEL 10 ſtone 10 pound (the difference in weight generally allowed between horſes of thoſe ages) and again the next year the beſt of three four mile heats, MORO carrying 9 ſtone, and CENTINEL 10 ſtone 10 pound, for the like ſum. MORO alſo begs leave to obſerve that the weights in CENTINEL's publication deprives him from running the ſix miles propoſed, on an equitable footing with him, was he ſo ambitious as to pretend to it, as CENTINEL would have an experienced white rider, and MORO be obliged to carry a white lad or negro, not ſo ſkilled in that profeſſion. But as CENTINEL is ſo deſirous of running a match of ſix miles, if he will wait till next year, when MORO's bones will be better knit, he will carry a ſtone more than is now required, and will accept his challenge, to be run any time between the 10th of April and the 1ſt of May, 1770, though he will not pretend to ſay how either of them may come in at the poſt, it being an unuſual diſtance, as has been already ſaid.

And as MORO's money may be equal to the ſum propoſed in the SPORTSMAN's challenge, he thinks it would not be running on an equal footing againſt the horſe that may be intended as his adverſary, as by a bet of that kind, he will be prevented from the advantage of covering next ſeaſon, but to ſhew he is not afraid of any horſe that will run as is propoſed, carrying weight for age, as follows, viz. 5 years old 9 ſtone, 6 years old 10 ſtone, and aged horſes 10 ſtone 10 pound, he will accept the SPORTSMAN's challenge, if he will deſcribe his horſe's colour, age, and the name he is now called by, and fix it a match or heats, as he may chooſe, play or pay.——An anſwer is expected in ſeven days, addreſſed to the Printer, who will forward it to MORO's owner, as nothing further will be received after that time, but prepare himſelf for the approaching ſeaſon for covering, and be kept for a ſtallion only.
